Christian Kinch
Bactiguard
CEO

Christian Kinch started his career as a pharmaceutical consultant when he left the Stockholm School of Economics in 1992. Two years later, Kinch started his first enterprise, the consulting company Kinchard, which provided pharmaceutical consultants to other companies in the industry. In 2006, the company was sold to Europe's largest company in the field, Consulting Pharmexx GmbH. In 1997, Kinch started his second enterprise, Netpharma, active in parallel imports of pharmaceuticals. After two and a half years, the turnover of Netpharma had increased to SEK 350 million. Netpharma entered the market as number 10 and in 2004, it became the second largest company in the field. Kinch felt that in order to develop Netpharma further, the company needed a partner. In 2001, IVAX (then listed on Nasdaq and the fifth largest generics company in the world) purchased Netpharma and Kinch continued as CEO for the Nordic region until 2004. In the spring of 2004, Kinch came across Bactiguard and in June 2005 he acquired a majority stake in the company, together with a partner. Since then, he has been the company CEO, with a short interim period as the Chairman of the Board. Bactiguard is a Swedish medical device company with a mission to save lives by preventing healthcare associated infections, one of the biggest challenges of our time. Bactiguard has an effective and safe technology, based on a Swedish innovation, which prevents bacterial adhesion and biofilm formation on medical devices and, thus, reduces the risk of infections and the use of antibiotics. This preventive innovation also reduces patient suffering, shortens hospital stay and saves significant costs for the healthcare sector.
