٥. Project description:
The purpose of the implementation of the plan is to build an Evacuated Tube production unit with a capacity of ٢٨,٨ million units per year in Tehran province. The Evacuated Tube, known by its brand name Vacutainer, is a device used to collect and sample blood from donors and patients. By creating a vacuum, this tube draws blood from the vein into it, making the blood collection process easier. To produce the blood collection tube, PET granules are initially fed into the extruder machine. Once melted, the material is removed from the extruder machine and molded into cylinders of specific sizes using the blowing equipment, which are then cut. in order to complete the product, colored covers must be prepared separately from the raw plastic material. After completing both parts of the supplement, the Evacuated Tube is sterilized, and essential additives are added to it. The air inside the pipes is removed by the compressors, creating a vacuum during a process. Finally, after passing through various laboratory stages, the product sample is labeled and placed in the package.
